Whereas research shows children do best when raised by two parents in a committed and long-term marriage;

Whereas, according to the United States Census Bureau, 18,400,000 children in the United States live without a father in the home;

Whereas data supports the hypothesis that having strong male role models in the home helps prevent suicide, behavioral disorders, juvenile detention, substance abuse, aggression, violence, and teen pregnancy;

Whereas fathers play an important role in teaching important life skills, providing guidance through challenges, and helping children persevere through adversity; and

Whereas by promoting fatherhood with amended policies that incentivize two-parent households and increasing evidence-based practices, the number of fatherless homes will decrease across all communities: Now, therefore, be it
