RESOLUTION

Affirming the role of the United States in improving access to quality, inclusive public education and improving learning outcomes for children and adolescents, particularly for girls, around the world.

Whereas January 24 has been proclaimed as the International Day of Education, in celebration of the role of education in development, economic prosperity, and global security;

Whereas access to quality education reduces poverty, advances economic prosperity, bolsters peace and security, and strengthens public health;

Whereas hourly earnings increase by 9 percent for every extra year of schooling;

Whereas every $1 invested in girls' education generates as much as $2.80 in return, equating to billions of dollars in additional GDP growth;

Whereas doubling the percentage of youth with secondary education can cut the risk of conflict in half;

Whereas secondary education can reduce the likelihood of young people supporting political violence by 48 percent;

Whereas 251 million children are out of school globally;

Whereas 3 out of 4 children in low- and middle-income countries cannot read and understand a simple text;

Whereas, approximately 473 million children, more than 1 in 6 globally, live in areas affected by conflict;

Whereas, in 2024, 49 percent of all school-aged refugee children were out of school;

Whereas education is lifesaving in emergencies and can provide a sense of stability, access to critical physical and mental health programs, and a chance to regain and grow essential cognitive skills, as well as essential learning like how to stay safe from unexploded bombs or how to prevent the spread of disease;

Whereas education in emergencies reduces the likelihood of child labor, trafficking, recruitment and use of children by Armed Forces or armed groups, child marriage, and adolescent pregnancy;

Whereas girls are 2.5 times more likely to be out of school in emergency settings, and are less likely to return to school following disruptions in their education;

Whereas disability is one of the most serious barriers to education, and there are 240 million children with disabilities worldwide;

Whereas, in fiscal year 2023, the United States Agency for International Development's (USAID) global education programs reached more than 44 million learners through preprimary, primary, secondary, vocational, and workforce development programs and provided nutritious meals to 3.5 million children across 34 countries, vocational and other workforce training to 1.5 million individuals, and educational interventions to more than 19.4 million young women and girls;

Whereas United States support for partnerships, including the Global Partnership for Education (GPE) and Education Cannot Wait (ECW), complements United States Government programs and leverages additional resources for this important work;

Whereas the United States Government has long been a leader in global education, and experience has shown that when the United States Government retreats from critical development and humanitarian programs, it leaves gaps that other influences will fill; and

Whereas Congress passed the bipartisan Reinforcing Education Accountability in Development (READ) Act (Division A, Public Law 115–56), in 2017 and reauthorized that bill in 2024 for an additional five fiscal years to demonstrate the United States Government's commitment to improve access to education around the world and ensure individuals around the world have the education and skills needed to be productive members of society and the workforce: Now, therefore, be it
